There is no such thing as a "period of adjustment" in the military. There's no training, no preparation, no "getting your feet wet." You’re in and you're expected to do your job. If you don’t like it, you can’t get out. You’ll be under a lot of stress, but that’s the way it is. If you want to earn money for college, find a career in the military. It’s your only option if you want to make a living. The military is the only place where you can earn a decent income. The job market is tough, but the military offers you a chance to earn a living. You’ll be able to make a good income, and you’ll be able to save money. You’ll be able to live a comfortable life. The military offers you a chance to live a comfortable life. You’ll be able to save money, and you’ll be able to enjoy your time off. You’ll be able to tour the world, and you’ll be able to meet new people. You’ll be able to make a difference in the world. You’ll be able to help others, and you’ll be able to feel good about yourself. You’ll be able to make a difference in the world. You’ll be able to help others, and you’ll be able to feel good about yourself. You’ll be able to make a difference in the world. You’ll be able to help others, and you’ll be able to feel good about yourself.
Before you join, take a good look at what you are getting into.

DO YOU KNOW ENOUGH TO ENLIST?

LEADERSHIP SKILLS
ADVENTURE
MONEY FOR COLLEGE
JOB TRAINING

Miltary Recruiters and their promises will not protect you in writing in your enlistment agreement. Make sure to get all the recruiters' promises in writing where you know and trust them.

If you decide to enlist:

THINK before you sign.

If you talk with a recruiter, don't rush.

Your decision about enlistment will affect your life for a special period of time. More recruiters must sign "sell, you on enlistment" to keep their jobs and the lives of others. Don't rush.

Do not sign any papers until you take them home for a parental or guardian to review.

If you decide to enlist:

THINK before you sign.